Town Planning - Then and Now

On February 3rd 2015, it will be fifty years since the then Housing Minister, Richard Crossman, announced in Parliament that Northampton, Ipswich and Peterborough were to be expanded. Each of them would have to accept induced growth of 70,000 people from the South-East Region by 1981. This came as a shock to councillors, landowners and small communities like Collingtree that were drawn into the areas to be expanded. The southern boundary of Northampton Borough was re-drawn along the route of the M1, thereby bringing rural Collingtree into the urban Borough for the first time. The body newly created to push through the whole expansion process was the Northampton Development Corporation (NDC) which took on all the designation and acquisition of land, the building of new housing estates, shopping centres, leisure facilities, employment areas like Brackmills and Moulton Park. For 16 years the NDC actively promoted the town to new residents and business investment.

Despite their initial shock, the County and Borough authorities worked out a partnership approach with the NDC that was unique in New Town planning and one that enabled an unprecedented rate of growth. Although the Expansion Programme got some things wrong (even then there were worries over the over reliance on warehousing and distribution) overall it worked well and followed a Master Plan that tried to protect the more rural areas like Collingtree. The open fields between the new estates of East and West Hunsbury and the Motorway, were left as 'Important Local Landscape', unallocated for development. Protection Orders were placed on most of the fine trees, especially those in the old parkland created by Pickering Phipps and the ancient village High Street became a Conservation Area.

Crucially, the NDC working with the partner authorities, ensured that the infrastructure needed to support all this rapid growth, was either in place or planned. In its 16 years the NDC built 44 miles of new roads (and kept them lit), provided 400 acres of Parkland and Playing Fields, and built 20 new schools and colleges. Development was governed by the Master Plan which set the ground rules for what should be built and where. The NDC wound up its work in 1985.

Thirty years later Town Planning for Northampton seems to work very differently. The 'Joint Core Strategy' promoted by a joint planning unit of Northampton, Daventry & South Northants Councils, will allow 39,000 houses, mainly around the Northampton boundary and with no clear guarantee that the infrastructure will be provided. Most of the sites earmarked (including the 1000 houses proposed for Collingtree) have been put forward by developers and with their consultants providing most of the 'independent' site surveys. At every public consultation, these sites have been overwhelmingly rejected by the surrounding communities, by local parish councils, all locally elected councillors and members of Parliament.

Without the vital infrastructure, critics say that Northampton will become like an overfed, overgrown Christmas Turkey - too big for its supporting structure and likely to collapse under its own weight.

As things stand, the Planning Inspector appointed to examine the 'Joint Core Strategy' has largely approved it, even though Northampton Borough councillors on the Joint Planning Committee, voted against it. It was only adopted on the casting vote of the Chairman, a councillor from Daventry. The Leader of NBC has said that he is 'disappointed' at the Inspector's decision to approve the expansion plans which place most of the impact on Northampton, but with the shots being called by Daventry and South Northants.

With council elections next May, just how well strategic Town Planning is now being handled, is likely to be a concern for many voters - along with how to prevent Northampton being dumped on by decisions of the adjoining councils of Daventry and South Northants. (see back page)

Ash Lane Traffic Calming. The scheme was discussed further at the Parish Council meeting on 10th September and a proposal has been put to Northamptonshire Highways for a 20 mph limit in Ash Lane, ideally without road humps, and the possibility of an additional flashing speed sign. A request for a pedestrian crossing with protective railings for the east of the crossroads has also been included. This will be discussed at the next meeting.

Planning matters

Golf Course development. The Planning Inspector's report allowed for SUE 5 to be developed but did stipulate certain conditions that have to be met. The revised version of the Bovis planning application has been submitted. The application numbers are N/2013/1035 and N/2013/1063 and parishioners should make their comments directly to Northampton Borough Planning Department.

Howden Proposals for just south west of M1 junction 15

An additional consultation meeting was held on 24th October at the Hilton Hotel and leaflets were delivered to houses in the village. Some changes have been made but the impact of the proposal in terms of visual detriment, pollution, vastly increased traffic and 24 hour noise remains considerable. The Parish Council will object to this strongly when any planning application is made.

Parish Council Clerk This position is becoming vacant in the near future. Anyone interested in this part-time, paid position should contact the present Clerk as below or the Chairman on 01604 764723

Planning Updates

Consultants for Bovis have submitted further documentation in support of the Phase 1 application for 378 houses (part of the 1000 proposed) on the Collingtree/East Hunsbury SUE 5 site. This is mainly in response to queries from Northamptonshire Highways about the layout of road junctions within the site. There is now a further period of consultation until 14th November. More details on www.HCRA2013.co.uk

A second exhibition of proposals for a 2m sq ft Distribution Centre next to J 15 was held at the Hilton Hotel. This would run the whole length of the boundary with Collingtree and is three times the size of the village. Concerns over the air pollution caused by the large number of diesel HGV's that would operate from the site were countered by claims that the J15 improvements would 'eliminate congestion at peak times' An application to South Northants Council is expected before Christmas and will be opposed by Collingtree, Milton Malsor and Roade Parish Councils.

Coach Trip to the National Memorial Arboretum

The visit organised by the Friends of St Columba to the NMA on 4th October, proved an uplifting experience on a day that began with rain but steadily brightened.
